STANFORD UNIVERSITY: Families making less than $100,000 per year are guaranteed free tuition. Families making less than $60,000 a year are not expected to pay tuition or contribute to the costs of room, board and other expenses. Stanford expects student to participate in paying for a portion of college costs. Your financial aid package for the academic year will include an expected contribution from student earnings. For most students, this expected contribution will be at least $5,000: at least $2,200 from prior earnings (particularly summer earnings), and $2,800 from part-time employment during the academic year. The total expected contribution from student earnings will vary based on individual circumstances. In addition, you will be expected to contribute from your personal assets, such as savings and investments, if any. The contribution amount per academic year is set at 5% of your total assets as reported in your financial aid application materials. You may choose to cover part or all of your expected contributions from earnings and assets with student loan funds. You can also reduce or eliminate your expected contribution from student earnings by obtaining outside scholarships. <http://www.stanford.edu/dept/finaid/undergrad/how/index.html>
